

Dixie School Coach "Found" Wes Ferrell

Ferrell, sensational young Cleveland pitcher, is doing so well because he was coached by Earl Holt, director of athletics of Oak Ridge Institute here.

Death Treasure

By R. A. J. WALLING

SYNOPSIS: Fugitives and pursuer become partners to solve the mystery of Roger Pell's death. Laxton does not arrest Grenofen and Sommerfeld in Brussels, but assists their aid and they agree to deliver the contents of the black bag.

Chapter 33 BANKNOTE DIPLOMACY THE express next morning landed Sommerfeld and myself in Brussels. We took rooms at the Hotel Terminus, as we had agreed with Laxton.

We had just begun to lay our plan of inquiry when we plunged into the middle of it. I was looking at the crowd pouring out of the station when I saw a woman hurrying to the narrow street by the side of the hotel.

She was in sight only a few seconds, but I recognized Miss Vandenssen. We dashed after her. She turned to the right around the hotel, walking fast, and made for the dome of the church of St. Marie.

We followed by a tortuous way, until she stopped at one tall house and rang. Sommerfeld and I dodged into a doorway till she was admitted. Then we walked to the end of the street to look at a plaque on the corner. It was the Rue Rogier—the eastern section of it.

"That cooks our goose!" said I. When Miss Vandenssen had put No. 39 in his guard we were not likely to get much out of it.

However, here was a plausible excuse for calling. We could now ask for Miss Vandenssen. And when we rang at the iron-grilled door of No. 39, that was what we did.

The concierge who opened was a little man with greenish-gray eyes and a rather obsequious manner.

"We called," I said, "in the hope that we might catch Miss Vandenssen, of Bruges."

"The concierge said he was desolated, but Miss Vandenssen had called and departed already. Sommerfeld brought his diplomacy into action. He took out his pocketbook and began to handle the notes therein.

"Miss Vandenssen came to call on madame—" Sommerfeld began. "Yes, monsieur, she called half an hour ago."

"What a pity we missed her!" exclaimed Sommerfeld. He turned to me. "Now we shall have to go to Bruges."

At this point we heard footsteps on the stairs to the right of the concierge, and a voice calling: "Joseph!"

A lady came to the bottom of the stairs. "Joseph—who are these gentlemen and what do they want?"

"They called expecting to find Mademoiselle Vandenssen, madame."

"All them mademoiselle is not here?"

"A third-person treatment was amusing. The lady was within two yards of us, but pretended we were not there."

Sommerfeld flicked the notes in his wallet, and looking Joseph straight in his eyes, said: "Ah, well, we shall have an hour to spare. Let's go and sit in the Botanical Gardens on that terrace in front of the grande serre, eh? Good-day."

We heard the lady's voice saying: "Shut the door, Joseph," and we were out in the Rue Rogier again. "No flies on madame," said Sommerfeld. "But I guess Joseph will fall for it. He has the bump of acquisition all right."

Sommerfeld's expectation was not disappointed. We walked along the front of the great glass houses to a terrace overlooking the park in the valley and sat on a bench. We should miss nobody who came on to the terrace.

Within 10 minutes Joseph appeared, whiffing a cigarette as he strolled leisurely round the end of the grande serre.

He was, of course, immensely surprised to encounter us. He raised his hat very politely and passed along.

"Joseph!" Sommerfeld called. "Monsieur?" said Joseph halting. Sommerfeld made room between us on the bench and Joseph sat down, remarking that the day made very hot. Sommerfeld was suddenly seen to be playing idly with a pocketbook stuffed full of money.

Last Night On the Air

By Georgie Flanders Something funny has happened in radio circles. Have you fans noticed it? The usual "here will be a brief pause for station announcements" is missing from NBC daytime programs this week. In its place is a musical note. The "brief pause" phrase was used to warn stations on the program to make their own station announcements.

Reception last night was fine in the early evening. Volume and signal strength had greatly improved since the preceding night, and static was resting. Around 10:30, however, the strength of the stations became weaker and by 11:30 reception was decidedly "mushy". Fudger got a good hold on the program as soon as the volume dwindled and nearly all of the programs were uneven and erratic.

A call for help from a radio listener of upper North Madison street came this morning, and tonight we shall look into it. The complainant tells us that the trouble only seems noticeable when the street lights are burning so it is very likely due to outside conditions.

Lovers of the fistic realm are offered a treat tonight when WIBX broadcasts the boxing bouts in Maennerchor Hall at 8:30. In the main event of the seven ring card Mickey George, Hoganburg, battler, and Vito Javarone of Gloversville will clash. Other main attractions will be Pete Baltusnek vs. George St. Angelo, and Danny Valsek vs. Tony Blond.

This is a story that Sandy MacFarlane, famous Scotch comedian, tells on himself. It seems that he was a Scotchman and an Irishman; the Scot said to Michael Crowley, superintendent of the Boston police, "How would you like to talk over WBZ next Thursday night?" "Well, Sandy," dryly responded Mr. Crowley, "this is such an unusual offer, considering the source, and you seem so anxious to give me the air free, that I'll take advantage of the opportunity before you change your mind."

The other day Milton Cross, feature announcer, received the following note: "My sister is desperately ill and can not possibly live very long. There is one thing she would like to hear over the radio and that is 'The Gypsy Rondo.' Many years ago she herself played 'The Rondo' and she has not heard it for a long time. . . . Would it be possible . . . ?"

Though it meant a re-arrangement of programs and an extra rehearsal—WJZ the letter indicated that the time was short—the request was granted and the dying woman was made happy by the sparkling Gypsy air.

Ronsome Renwick, cold, shrewd, analytical and memmortal, the WEAF at 10:30. The plot centers around Robert Brooke, the bored young survivor of a wealthy and aristocratic family. He grows restless under the recollections of the ancestral curse invoked by a dying grandfide, who collected wealth by questionable methods. Brooke's gloomy domicile is known even beyond the borough line of New York as the "mystery house." It becomes the object of the professional attention of a gang of criminals, who, headed by the sinister Professor Montegle, scheme to steal a fortune in gems believed to be concealed in the house. A young girl is found crouching in the rain on the fire escape. She enters the room and the story with all its mystery is off to test the astuteness of Ransome Renwick, New York's greatest detective, rival of Sherlock Holmes and Philo Vance.
